* Herbarium specimen lodged (AK or WEL)

? Doubtful record

1 indicates a species not seen on current survey but listed by others

2 planted or seeded into the area

3 Found only in the Mill Creek area

4 in pasture just outside Pikarere farm fenceline

Notable plants found in this area are:

Adiantum diaphanum. A maidenhair fern that is local in its occurrence around Wellington. It is found growing at the base of a rock face on the true right at the top of the stream that descends to the Ngahue street entrance.

Adiantum fulvum. A maidenhair fern that occurs locally around Wellington. It was seen on the true right of the stream that descends towards the Ngahue Street entrance.

Adiantum viridescens. Another localised maidenhair fern. It can be found trackside and above on the Rangituhi track starting at the first decking on this track.

Drymoanthus adversus. This epiphytic orchid is probably more common than reported, but due to its preference for growing quite high up in the trees of preference, it is hard to find. A few plants were seen well up the logging track above the Mill stream catchment growing on a rather stunted tawa.

Gastrodia cunninghamii. Ken Wright from WRC reported finding this orchid while laying possum bait lines. Following his instructions a patch of 10 plants was found in full flower 15/1/00.

Microsorum novaezelandiae. This record comes off an old Wellington Botanical Society list and must remain open to question pending the finding of the species again or the locating of a herbarium specimen. This fern is usually found in montane areas like the Tararuas.

Mida salicifolia. The willow leaved maire is recorded in a Botsco species list and has been verified by A.P. Druce (J Coulter personnel comment)

Ophioglossum coriaceum. The adders tongue fern while not uncommon on the likes of Mt KauKau is not widespread in the Wellington area. There is a small patch to be found on the Waiho Terrace track.

Pittosporum cornifolium. This species is recorded on various lists and is probably epiphytic on collospermum clumps but has not been recently sighted.

Pseudopanax edgerleyi. At least three specimens of this tree are to be found in the bush in the Mill stream catchment. This is privately owned land belonging to Pikarere Farms but which is fenced off and contiguous with the reserve.

Pterostylis porrecta. A greenhood orchid flowering in early December through to mid January just after Pterostylis graminea has finished. It is a species that has until the discovery of this occurrence by Peter Beveridge, has been listed as rare. There have been about 5 other small locations around Hawkes Bay, Wairarapa and Marlborough. It is reasonably common towards the top of the Rangituhi track and scattered occurrences lower down off the Waiho Terrace track.

Streblus banksii. The large leafed milktree is local wherever it is found and in the reserve it can be found scattered throughout. There is a 4 metre specimen on the Ngahue Street track on the true left just before the "metal bridge".

Winika cunninghamii. The lady's slipper orchid is not common along the western hills (although common elsewhere) and the plants seen growing on tawa in the Mill Stream catchment were magnificent specimens.

Weed problems:

Wandering willie is the main problem species. It has quite a hold along the eastern boundary. The other adventive species are scattered, mainly along the boundaries and particularly where garden rubbish has been thrown over the back fence from neighbouring properties. Inkweed (Phytolacca octandra) is found occasionally and should be rooted out when found before it becomes a major nuisance.

Gorse is common on some ridges but is acting as a nursery plant for native species and will gradually disappear as these grow and shade it out

There does not seem to be a problem with the pines that bound the bush mainly on the western boundary. There is little evidence of wildlings and the thick bed of pine needles provides a great place for duck orchids (Chiloglottis cornuta) and seedling natives.

There is some evidence of cannabis (Cannabis sativa) cultivation with old plots and water bottle dumps but no current activity was noted.

Carex longibracteata is classed as a noxious weed and is found growing in a small patch on the clay track from Aparangi Grove to the Elsdon Camp carpark and on the ridge track above Aparangi Grove.
